PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

ROGER A. PRIEST, VICE PRESIDENT

Roger's love for functional building design caused him to seek collegiate training in architecture at one of the country's leading architectural colleges. After earning a Bachelor's Degree in Design from Clemson University he interned with an architectural/construction firm in West Palm Beach assisting in the creation of construction drawings for retail shopping plazas and multi-family residential. Here he witnessed the creation of design and the reality of bricks and mortar. He gained a passion for design/build construction which brought him to graduate study in Construction Management, again at Clemson. Earning a Master's Degree in Construction Management, he was prepared to enter the design/build arena, coming to be employed by Richard K. Davis Construction Corporation in the spring of 1989.

He quickly gained hands-on experience with one of the areas leading design/build construction firms using his training and understanding in design to help create both highly functional and aesthetically pleasing buildings that were economical and quick to build. He has honed his skills through many years of experience in budget development, cost effective design, construction management, procurement and cost control.
